Christmas Defended against its Prophaners.

Unhappy times in which we live! That we should all believe, that sixteen Hundred years ago, a certain Man, who was also God, called Jesus, was born in a Stable for the Salvation of Mankind; and yet, that there should be certain amongst us, who should count it a piece of Religion, not to keep Holy the Day, on the which our said Great Redeemer was born: O unhappy Times! O cross Manners, of mis-instructed Zelots! Does not Reason, the Light of God within us, tell us, that if the Consubstantial Son of the Almighty, has been so Good, as for our sakes to become Man, cloathing himself with the Rags of our Mortality: We ought with Joy and Thanksgiving, to remember so high a Favour? And does not the same Reason and Experience teach us, that the setting a part that particular Day, as near as we can guess, on which some notable Accident has happened, in Memory of it, does strangely help us, more lively, freshly, and affectionately to commemorate the said Wonder? Tell me candidly your Thoughts, Should we by no other Memorial but the History of Boscobel, relate to Posterity, the wonderful Restauration of our Gracious Sovereign, how little knowledge, and how faint a Belief think you would there be all over England, of that strange Wonder and all its circumstances a thousand years hence? We cannot reasonably imagin, but the generality of the common People would be wholly ignorant of it, and we may without rash Judgment surmize, there would not want Cavilling Wits, who would call in question the whole Story, and for some seemingly, unlikely circumstances, condemn the whole Narration as fabyulous, or at best, of very doubtful and uncertain credit: So that in effect, Posterity some Ages hence, would have little more Belief of that undoubted History, than we have now of the Fable of Guy of Warwick. But let us go on as we have begun, to commemorate that strange accident, with a Day set a part on purpose, Religiously to be observed in all the Parishes of England, by publick Prayers, and Sermons, suited to the occasion, occasion, and 'tis not possible, but till Dooms-day come, there shall be an assured Belief, and fresh Memory of it in the generality of all English Hearts. Has Nature then made us so cunning for ever to keep in memory what we have a mind should never be forgotten? And can you think Grace, or the Holy Ghost was wanting to make the first Planters of Christianity so wise, as to think upon a happy Expedient; how all Generations all the World over, might have a fresh Memory, and assured Faith of the wonderful Nativity of their Lord and Saviour; especially when the lively Memory of the said their Lord's Nativity, with all it's circumstances is strangely conducing to the Salvation of the World? But why do I urge the authority of Reason and Nature? Did not infinit unerring Wisdom, and the God of Nature use this very Means, to propagate to posterity the Memory of the stupendious Wonders, he wrought amidst his beloved People the Jews, by the hand of his Servant Moses? Read from the sixth Chapter to the fourteenth, in the Book of Exodus, and take notice of those strange Wonders Almighty God wrought, to compel Pharaoh, to let his chosen People go into the Wilderness to worship him; turning all the Rivers of Egypt into Blood, filling the whole Country, in their very houses with Frogs, &c. and finally, killing all their First-born both of Man and Beasts. And now because a lively Memory of these Wonders to all Generations, would be of admirable benefit to every Age; as well to preserve in them a strong actual Faith of the true God, the Author of all those Miracles, as a Holy Dread of the same Divine Majesty, and care to observe his Commandments. Almighty God ordained that for ever, that very day, on which his People came out of Egypt, should be Solemn and Sacred; and observed with such Ceremonies, as might make Posterity even see their Ancestors going out of Egypt many hundreds of years before. They must kill a Lamb, and eat the flesh of the same Lamb with Unleavened Bread, &c. in token of what their Ancestors did in like manner in Egypt, and to remember the great haste in which they departed, with unleavened Dough on their backs: and for ever offer to Almighty God their First-born, both of Man and Beasts, in memory of his killing the Firstlings of the Egyptians, and sparing theirs. And this account they were to give of this Ceremonial observance; when they should in future Generations be asked the reason of it by their Children.

Exod. 13. v. 14. When thy Son shall ask thee to Morrow, saying, What is this? Thou shalt answer him; in a strong hand the Lord brought us out out of the Land of Egypt: For when Pharaoh was hardened, and would not let us go; the Lord killed all the First-born in the Land of Egypt, from the First-born of Man to the Firstling of Beasts; therefore I sacrifice to the Lord all that opens the Womb of the Masculine Sex, and all the First-begotten of my Sons I redeem. Such a provision as this, made it utterly impossible to the Jews, ever to forget for all Generations, what the Almighty had wrought in favour of their Ancestors in bringing them out of Egypt. And he must be out of his Wits, or devoid of common sense, that could question a matter of Fact, so solemnly immemorially commemorated, and so particularly recounted in a Book; which a whole People time out of mind has venerated as a most true History. For had the Rivers of Egypt not been turned into Blood, (the like I say of the rest of the Wonders) no man could have had the impudence to have committed to Writing as most certain Truths, what thousands must necessarily have known to be most notorious Lyes. Much less could any one have prevailed with many thousands, in a most serious and solemn manner to commemorate yearly with thanksgiving to God, what they all knew had never happened.

And can it now enter into any Christian mans heart to think, that Moses was more faithful and careful to preserve in the Memories of the Jews, the Wonders the Almighty wrought to deliver that particular People from under the Bondage of Pharaoh: Then was Jesus Christ and his Apostles, to keep in the fresh memory of all Christians, the stupendious Wonders wrought to deliver the whole World, from the Eternal slavery of Sin and Devils? Let it be Four of our Lords followers, have left written Memorials of his Birth, Life, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension into Heaven. But had all his first Missionaries to the World, ordained in every County converted by them to the Christian Faith, that they should yearly spend the Day of his Nativity (which they might easily learn from his Holy Mother) in Prayer, Reading, Hearing, and Meditating that Mystery with all it's circumstances, and the ends for which it was so wrought: Would not such an Observation as this in every Christian Parish in the World, have strangely conduced to a pious, profitable, grateful memory of that Miracle of Love, of God's becoming a little Infant for the Salvation of the World? And this methinks should be sufficient to satisfie any reasonable man, that the keeping Holy, by a yearly Observation, of the sacred time of our dear Lord's Nativity, was not only worthy the Holy Apostles Institution; tution; but also that it cannot be well understood, how they could be faithful in their Office, without the making of such an Ordination; or at least without leaving Power and Charge to their Successors so to ordain. Such Ordinations being absolutely necessary to posterity at a long distance; howsoever, less needful they might be, to them who lived so near the time, when that and the other Myſteries of our Lord Jesus were acted. Nor let us deceive our selves and posterity, by pretending to remember our Lord's Nativity every Day; too sad Experience telling us, this is the way seldom or never, soundly and heartily to think of it. In our own Country, what's become of all memory of Gowry's Conspiracy, for want of a day to remember it? And had not the fifth of November been set a part particularly to remember the Gun-powder Treason, but had every one been lost to remember it every day, in all likelihood the memory of that horrid Plot had been by this time quite lost in the memories of the vulgar people.

But all that I have hitherto been saying, only shews, that the appointment of a particular time to remember our Lord's Nativity, was worthy of the Holy Apostles; but what evidence have we that the Holy Apostles have actually made any such Ordination? Why, what evidence would you have? Indeed they have written no Book to recommend the Observation of any particular day to Posterity; but if they have taught such an Observation by word of mouth, to all the Countries in the World, where they preached the Gospel; is not this sufficient? Let us then in our thoughts, Travel into the several Christian Countries of the World, and see what they observe. And first let us take a view of our own Native Country, and enquire when we began, upon the 25th. of December, every year particularly, to lay aside all our worldly Affairs, and with Prayers, and other Holy Exercises, to remember our dear Lord's Birth? The oldest man alive, can tell us no beginning of this our practice. No Chronicles, no Annals give us any account of it's beginning neither. They tell us indeed, that St. Joseph of Arimathea, not long after our Blessed Saviour's Departure into Heaven, brought Christianity into our Country; but they do not tell us of any one since that time, who enjoyned us to keep Christmas Day Holy. The same Annals tell us, that about the year six hundred, one Austin, with certain Companions came from Rome to convert our Nation, then over-run by the Infidel Saxons, from Paganism to Christianity. They tell us also, that the same Austin, found certain British Christians driven into Wales by by the Saxons; and make mention also how the said Austin, and the Christian Brittains, differed about certain Ceremonies in the administration of Baptism; and moreover, upon what Sunday they should keep Easter Day; both agreeing Easter Day was to be kept; the one holding upon the 14th. of the Moon of March, in case it hapned on the Sunday, the other not till the Sunday following. But now had they differed about the keeping of Christmas Day, and that so, as one should have said, a day was to be kept, and precisely the 25th. of December, and the other should have contended no Day at all was to be kept: This would have been a more notorious Disagreement, than upon what Sunday Easter was to be solemnized; and consequently would have been taken notice of by our Historiographers. Hence I infer, the Brittains kept holy Christmas Day, before the coming of Austin. For it cannot be doubted, but Austin brought from Rome the Religion that was then practised at Rome. And tis manifest that at Rome, they then, and many years before kept Holy the day of our Lord's Nativity. For we have Sermons preached at Rome upon the day of our Lord's Nativity, by St. Leo Pope, above a hundred years before. Nor let any one be afraid of Rome, and her way of *V*Worship thus early; the Church of England willingly appeals to the Faith and Practice of Rome, and other Christian Cities, for the first six hundred years after our Blessed Saviour. Besides, had the Observation of Christmas in our Nation, been begun since our Conversion to Christianity by Austin, our Chroniclers would make mention, what National Synod or Council, commanded it to be so universally observed, as it has been time out of mind in every Parish in England. Should any Forreiner that comes into our Country, take notice of the standing of our Plows, the shutting up of our Shops, and the frequenting of Divine Service in every Parish, upon the fifth of November, he would instantly conclude, we never fell upon such a Practice by chance; but that it was so commanded and ordained by some Sovereign power Ecclesiastical or Civil. The like Discourse will every rational man make, upon the general Religious Observations of Christmas Day: To wit, that we never fell upon such an Observance by chance; but either we were all taught so by the first Planters of Christianity in our Nation; or enjoined so to do by some Supreme Authority since; but our Annals making no mention of any such Ordination, 'tis rightly concluded, we were so taught by our first Christian Masters.

But if you give a little more scope to your Thoughts, and Consider der that not only England, but Holland, Germany, France, Spain, Italy, and other Christian Country's, have Immemorially from their first Conversion to Christianity, kept Holy the Day of our Lords Nativity: Nor is there any mention of any General Council, or other Universal Authority's imposing any such Observation upon them: this Reflection will compel you to acknowledg this Practice must needs have been taught, the several Nations of Christendom, by the first Preachers of the Gospel the Holy Apostles. And remarkable to my present purpose, is the Rule of the Great St. Augustin: VVhatso-ever we find, universally practised over all the Christian VVorld, we safely Conclude, either to have been Ordained by the Apostles or some General Council, for that it cannot be presumed, that whole Nations could by chance fall upon the Religious Observation of the same Day, or other Ceremonial Right. And he whom such a Discourse as this does not satisfy; but he still Doubts & Disputes; How can he be sure the Apostles ever taught any such Observation? Such an one I say let him take heed; for he is dangerously disposed to throw away the whole New Testament. For how can he tell St. Matthew wrote this Book; St. Luke that, and so of the rest, but by the universal immemorial Testimony of several Christian Country's. If Almighty God will Oblige me to keep such Dates Holy, as were so appointed, and reverence such Books as Divine, as were by Divine Inspiration written, sixteen Hundred Years before I was born, he cannot reasonably expect I should know and distinguish either the one or the other, but by the immemorial Testimonys of my Ancestors in several Countries. But now at the Day of judgment I should Answer the refusal of such a Book, or the Non-Observance of such a Day; So immemorially recommended by my Ancestors, I cannot tell. It belongs to the providence of our Blessed Saviour to take care, that no Age should be so devilishly malicious, universally to tell their Children, a Book of their own forging (the like may be said of a Holy Day or other Ritual Observance) was written by a Holy Apostle of Jesus Christ, some hundred of Years before. One Man may be presumed to be so Malicious, whole Nations never did, nor ever can do any such thing. Nor does the Church of England in this differ from the Church of Rome, as if she thought what the Apostles VVrit, was of greater Authority then what they Taught, or Ordained. She willingly admits all Traditions, of which she can have good proof, that they come from the Apostles. Such are the Observations of Christmas, Lent, Easter, &c.

 But

But if Christmas Day was taught the World by the Apostles, how comes it to pass we have no mention of it in all the New Testament? What daies were to be Observed by the Jews, are made mention of, over and over in the old Testament; how comes it to pass, if Christmas Day, or other Days be to be Observed by Christians, we find no mention of them in any of the Books of the New Scripture, Reflect upon the nature of the Books of the two Testaments, and the Reason is Manifest. For if you consider the Old Testament, you will find not only Historical Books, such are the books of Judges, the Kings &c. and moral Books which treat of good Life, &c. such are the Proverbs, Ecclesiastes & others: But besides these, there are Ritual Books, which by the very subject of them every one sees, their Design was to describe the external Mosaical Worship, as to Observation of Daies, Priestly Garments, Sacrifices, &c. Such are the Books of Exodus, Leviticus, and Deuteronomy. And therefore no wonder if you find exactly set down, what Daies that people was to keep Holy, How their Priests were to be Consecrated, and how Vested in time of Divine Service, &c. But now cast your Eye upon all the Books of the New Testament, and you'll not find one that you can reasonably presume, the Author of it had a Design in it, to Describe the External Worship of the Gospel: What daies for Example, we Christians are to observe in memory of Christian Mercies and Misteries, what Garments our Priests are to use in Divine Service, &c. And yet the Light of God within us tells us, such Institutions are very useful to increase Piety, when Religiously Observed: and all History tells us, that immemorially in all Nations, there have been certain external Christian Rites, not mentioned in the Holy Scriptures, ever since the first planting of Christianity amongst them. The four Gospels are a History of our Blessed Saviours Life and Death, who lived as to the external Rites of Religion according to the Jewish Law, and so we cannot reasonably in any of them expect, what Days we Christians are to observe in the time of the Gospel. Indeed had the Acts of the Apostles been intended as an exact Narration, how the Apostles lived as to the whole course of their Life, what Days they kept Holy, and what Days they Fasted, &c. We might reasonably have expected some mention there of Christmas Day and Lent: But that Holy Book making mention only, of some few particular passages, of two or three of the Apostles Lives; the Apostles might well keep Christmas Day and Lent too, and teach them also to their first Converts, and yet there be a profound silence of such Observations in the Book of their Acts. As for St. Johns Prophetical Book; it were no ways proper in it, to treat either of Christmas Day or Lent. Though I must tell you, for ought you or I know, when St. John says he was in the Spirit on the Lords Day, he may mean the Day of our Lords Birth, or the yearly Easter Day of his Resurrection, as well as our V Weekly Sunday. The rest of the New Testament are certain Epistles or Letters of spiritual Counsels written by St. Paul or some other Apostle, to particular Persons or whole Cities, already instructed in the Christian way of V Worship: But why they should needs make mention therein of Christmas Day, I understand not, unless perchance the Persons they wrote unto, had been deficient in keeping it Holy.
 B. their

But, does not St. Paul expressly decry the keeping of Christmas Day, in one of his Epistles, and tells the Christians he wrote to, he was afraid he had laboured in vain amongst them, by reason of their Superstitious Observation of Dayes. Gal. 4. 9. 10. How are ye Converted again to weak and beggarly Elements, which you will Serve again? Ye observe Dayes, and Months, and Times and Years. I am afraid of you, lest I should have laboured amongst you in Vain. Was then the Holy Apostle afraid, lest the Galatians should leave Christianity, and return to Judaism or Paganism, because of their Observing Christmas Day, in Memory of our Blessed Saviour's Birth, or Lent, in Memory of his Fasting forty Dayes, or Easter, in Memory of his Resurrection? Is this a likely Story? Or is it not evident from the Context, Of their returning again to weak and poor Elements, that because of their returning to the Observation of Jewish Dayes, Commanded by Moses, or Pagan Dayes, in honour of Jupiter, Mars, or Saturn, he was afraid they would Relinquish the Gospel, by them Received, and become Jews again or Pagans. But, still methinks, I am afraid of Superstition, and Will-Worship, by observing a Day, which, I fear, God has never Commanded me. But you have more reason to be afraid of Prophahers, in neglecting a Day which you have all reason to think God has Commanded you to keep Holy, if you Reflect well upon what I have said, a'ove. Seeing you are Commanded to keep Holy Christmas Day, by doing only such Actions, as you acknowledge to be Christianly and Good, What danger can there be of Superstition? Especially, when you are not Taught neither, that such Actions are then more acceptible to God Almighty, than at another times. Only, you are Commanded at that Set-Time to do them, lest, otherwise, you should wholly omit them. My dearest Relations (whom I pity with my Soul) take heed whilst under under pretence of Opposing Anti-Christ, you be not one day found Abettors of Anti-Christ. Consider, Anti-Christ is to Leny and Oppose Christ; and then think, Who are more like Anti-Christ, those who piously observe certain Dayes, in Memory of the Birth, Death, and Resurrection of Christ, or those who prophane and decry all such Dayes as Superstitious? Who are most likely to promote Anti-Christ's Design, that is, to Abolish and Root all Memory of Christ out of the World, the Devout Observers, or Irreligious Prophaners of Christ's solemnities?

But were it not better, to remember and ponder the Mystery of our Lord's Nativity, with it's circumstances every day? No, He that would grasp many things together, holds fast few, or perhaps none. The capacity of our Souls is so limited, that if we would have the Thoughts of our Lord's humble Nativity sink deep into us, and efficaciously work the spiritual Fruit they are apt to work in us, we must entertain them, and no other but them for a good season together, and repeat them over and over. He that will pretend to have all sorts of spiritual Thoughts every day, will I fear, upon no day, have any to any spiritual purpose. Let us not pretend to be wiser than God Almighty. He ordered the Jews, and he has ordered us Christians, also a grateful Variety of spiritual Seasons. Let it therefore be concluded against the Non-conformists (the All-Merciful Jesus open their Eyes) that a Religious Observation of Christmas, has nothing of Superstition, but a great deal of Christian Piety in it.

And now, we are resolved Christmas ought to be kept, but how must we keep it? If any Man keep a day, let him keep it to the Lord; So as his keeping of it may not Contristate, but Recreate, and Rejoyce his Dear and Greatest Lord: So, as his keeping of it, may make him all the Year after, more strong and ready, to imitate and tread in the Steps (as near as Humane-Frailty will permit,) of his same Lord. Let now this Holy time be spent, as to the far greatest part of it, in devout Prayers, frequent Meditations upon the Mysteries of the Solemnity, Reading spiritual Books, Hearing Sermons suited to the occasion; Giving large Alms to God Almighty in his poor and needy, in gratitude to him, who at this time gave us no less than his only Son, &c. And the truth is, that which makes many well meaning, and tenderly Conscientious Christians, to make no distinction of this Sacred Time, from another, was the intolerable abuse of it, by its pretended Religious Observers. Time would fail me, if I should go about to enumerate the Debaucherys, with which this Sa-and Time has been prophaned. May they never be Remembered unless it be to VVeep for them, and to excite our selves to make amends for them, by a double diligence in all Holy and Christian Exercises, these Dates of Christ. Had this holy Time been ever spent, according to its Primitive Institution in more abundant VVorks of Piety and Charity: And when our Spirits had been wearied out with Spiritual exercises; had we refreshed Nature by a Festival Reflection of some harmless Disport; but still with a vigilant Watch in honor of the Sacred Season, so to play, as our Pastime might not make our Great little Jesus VVweep: Had, I say, this Holy Time been ever thus holily Observed, the Devil himself could not have had the Impudence, to have declared against it, as Antichristian. But indeed, as it has been of late Observed, or rather Prophaned, we may without a slander, say, it was become a truly Antichristian Time indeed.

But what Remedy, then? Abandon the new prophaned Abuse, and retrieve the first pious Use. But what Fruit may we expect from a Religious Observation of this Holy Time? Observe it, as was said above, and you'll be better able to tell me afterwards at Twelve-tide, then I can tell you before, on Christmas Eve.
