The following charts recreate the weeks of the Hebrew calendar and priestly courses for the years B.C. 23- A.D. 70. The Hebrew calendar was reformed in the fourth century by Hillel II and contains elements not present in Jesus' day. Hillel's reforms include various postponements of Rosh Hashanah (Tishri 1, the Jewish New Year) to prevent it falling adjacent to the Sabbath, and the seventh day of Tabernacles from falling on the Sabbath, in both cases to prevent two consecutive days of fasting by forced cessation of labor. To accomplish this, the length of the year is adjusted between 353, 354, and 355 in regular years, and 383, 384, and 385 in leap years. Because these postponements did not exist in Jesus' day, the present-day Hebrew calendar is not a reliable guide to ancient dates, and offers at best only an approximation. However, because it is widely employed, we have used it here except where the dates produced are known to be in error or conflict with the testimony of history. Specifically, Jewish tradition dating 80 years from the event tells us that the 9th of Ab the week the temple was destroyed the second time fell on a Sunday. However, Hillel II's calendar causes this day to fall on a Saturday, one day off. Scripture tells us Jesus died on Good Friday, Nisan 15, A.D. 33, but Hillel II's calendar places Nisan 15 on a Saturday. In these instances, we have corrected the present charts to conform with scripture and the testimony of history. However, as Hillel II's calendar typically varies by only one or two days from the witness of scripture, for purposes of showing Christ could have been born Dec. 25th, variations in the calendar will not affect the overall result.

6. Jij	Baptism of Christ Nov. 8 (Heshvan 15), A.D. 29 →					3-9	6-12	1-7 Heshvan	5-11	1-7 Heshvan	3-9	Jewish men began their public ministries when they were 30 yrs. old. Jesus was on the threshold of his 30 th birthday when baptized by John in the 15 th of Tiberius (A.D. 29) (Luke 3:1, 23). This means Jesus was born in 2 B.C. A person born in 2 B.C. will turn 30 yrs. old before the close of A.D. 29. Therefore, Jesus' 30 th birthday occurred sometime after his baptism, but before Dec. 31 st of that year. To identify the range of months, we reckon backward from his crucifixion.																		3-9	4-10	6-12	1-7 Heshvan

11. J	Assuming the temptation following his forty-day fast was seven days long, it would have ended Dec. 25 th (Tebet 3). Jesus then returned to John who was baptizing in the Jordan at Bethabara, where he made his first disciples, showing he was now turned 30 yrs old. The wedding at Cana (Epiphany) occurred Tebet 15 (Jan. 6).					9-15	11-17	6-12	7-13	11-17	6-12	7-13	11-17	6-12	7-13	11-17	6-12	7-13	11-17	6-12	7-13	11-17	6-12	7-13	11-17	6-12	7-13

20. Jehezkel	1	January 1 st in the Julian calendar typically falls in the Jewish month of Tebet, so that the first twelve weeks or so of the priestly courses would belong to the previous year. In the present chart, January 1 st fell on Tebet 28, eighteen weeks into the column marked "AD 2." For this reason, when a course drops off the bottom of the chart, it does not resume service or appear in the top of the next column since that is the same year, but skips a column, resuming service at the top of the following year.

The Jews used a luni-solar calendar whose months were determined by the cycles of the moon. A lunar year of 12 months is 11 days shorter than the solar year. The Jews added one month (II Adar) 7 times in 19 years to bring the lunar calendar back in synchronization with the solar year. Leap years are indicated by yellow high-lighting at top. The extra month was added as a 13th month at the end of the year. We do not know how leap years affected the progression of the priestly courses. The approach taken here is that each course whose chance it was to serve in Adar during a leap year served an extra week, allowing for the uniform, unbroken progression of the courses.

Leap years are determined by multiplying the Jewish year from creation by 235 (the number of lunations in a 19-year cycle), subtract 234, and divide by 19. If the remainder is 12 or above, it is a leap year; if less than 12, it is a regular year. For the year A.D. 3792 the equation would be as follows: $3792 \times 235 = 891120 - 234 = 890886 \div 19 = 46888$ R14

January 1st in the Julian calendar typically falls in the Jewish month of Tebet, so that the first twelve weeks or so of the priestly courses would belong to the previous year. In the present chart, January 1st fell on Tebet 28, eighteen weeks into the column marked "AD 2." For this reason, when a course drops off the bottom of the chart, it does not resume service or appear in the top of the next column since that is the same year, but skips a column, resuming service at the top of the following year.

The Hebrew calendar was reformed in the fourth century by Hillel II and contains elements not present in Jesus' day. Hillel II's reforms include various postponements of Rosh Hashanah (Tishri 1, the Jewish New Year) to prevent it and other feast days from falling on or next to the Sabbath. To accomplish this, Rosh Hashanah is made to occur only on set days under differing conditions, and the length of the year adjusted accordingly between 353, 354, and 355 in regular years, and 383, 384, and 385 in leap years. Because these postponements did not exist in Jesus' day, the present-day Hebrew calendar is not a reliable guide to ancient dates, and offers at best only an approximation. However, because it is widely employed, we have used it here except where the dates produced are known to be in error or conflict with the testimony of history. Specifically, Jewish tradition dating 80 years from the event tells us that the 9th of Ab the week the temple was destroyed the second time fell on a Sunday. However, Hillel's calendar causes this day to fall on a Saturday, one day off. Scripture indicates Jesus died on Good Friday, Nisan 15, A.D. 33, but Hillel's calendar places Nisan 15 on a Saturday. In these cases we have corrected the present charts to conform with scripture and the testimony of history. However, as a given week will vary by several days at most, for purposes of showing Christ could have been born Dec. 25th, variations in the calendar will not affect the overall result.
