The following charts recreate the weeks of the Hebrew calendar and priestly courses for the years B.C. 23- A.D. 70. First published in 2010, the charts have gone through several revisions to correct typographical errors and omissions. This edition (2025), follows their review by Andrew E. Steinmann, professor emeritus of Theology and Hebrew at Concordia University, Chicago, “Information in the Gospels that Cannot be Used to Determine the Date of Jesus’s Birth” (JETS 67.3 (2024) 493-504). Steinmann noted several errors in the colorization process resulting in “launae” in the courses, which are corrected here. However, the launae did not change the dates of Zachariah’s putative service in 3 BC. It is important to note, that because the course of Abijah served twice annually, the charts do not allow us to prove when Zachariah served, or when John and Christ were born. However, they do clearly show the possibility that Jesus was born in early winter at or near the received, traditional date. And that is all that is intended to be shown. Early tradition placed Jesus’ birth in winter based upon the fiction Zachariah was High Priest serving at Atonement when he received the vision of Gabriel. The Protevangelium Jacobi (circa AD 170) is the earliest example of this. The fiction that Zachariah was High Priest may have been an expedient to authenticate the winter birth of Christ at a time when men still knew the tradition Zachariah served near Atonement, but did not know how to recreate the priestly courses to demonstrate the fact and therefore resorted to the fiction instead. The present charts are offered to provide a solution to this ancient dilemma. (Charts without text-boxes are provided below for closer examination.)

| S             | Following his baptism, Jesus undertook a 40-day fast in preparation for his public ministry. Jesus then returned to John who was baptizing in the Jordan at Bethabara, where he made his first disciples, showing he was now turned 30 yrs old. The wedding at Cana (Epiphany) occurred Tebet 15 (Jan. 6). |  |             |                     |             | 2-8         | 4-10                | 29-5 Casleu | 29-6 Casleu   | 4-10                | 29-5 Casleu | 29-6 Casleu   | 2-8                 | 5-11          | 29-6 Casleu   | 2-8                 | 3-9           | 29-5 Casleu   | 2-8                 | 2-8           | 5-11          | 2-8                 | 2-8           | 5-11          | 29-5 Casleu |

| 5. Malchijah  | 27-3 Heshvan       | The Jews used a luni-solar calendar whose months were determined by the cycles of the moon. A lunar year of 12 months is 11 days shorter than the solar year. The Jews added one month (II Adar) 7 times in 19 years to bring the lunar calendar back in synchronization with the solar year. Leap years are indicated by yellow high-lighting at top. The extra month was added as a 13 th month at the end of the year. We do not know how leap years affected the progression of the priestly courses. The approach taken here is that each course whose chance it was to serve in Adar during a leap year served an extra week, allowing for the uniform, unbroken progression of the courses. |            |                     |  |             |                     |            |                     |             |             |                    |             |  |                    |             |             |                    |             |                     |               |             |                     |            |       |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |

If the remainder is 12 or above, it is a leap year; if less than 12, it is a regular year. For the year A.D. 32, the equation would be as follows: $3792 \times 235 = 891120 - 234 = 890886 \div 19 = 46888 R14$ |                    |             |             |                    |             |                     |               |             |                     |            |       |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |  |
